THIS WEEK'S UPDATE

Happy Friday folks! Hope all of your New Years have got off to a great start.

For the compact, this first full week back has been a busy one! On Monday, the youth theme group met and discussed ideas and plans for some pilot activity with young people for their focus project 'What will you do when you're in charge?' to take place over the next couple of months. We had a lively discussion with everyone offering lots of suggestions for areas of focus and particular groups we could work with. Longer term, there is much to build on here to ensure young people play an active role in helping shape the work of the compact and the creation of the heritage corridor.

Next week, on the 20th Jan, the heritage and volunteering theme group will be meeting! This group has a focus on volunteering opportunities, establishing the heritage corridor through public activity, and exploring how digital technology could help us connect heritage spaces and stories in the area. Similarly to the youth group, we will also be planning some pilot activity to take place over the next couple of months. This is likely to focus on how we celebrate volunteers and amplify volunteering opportunities over the next couple of months, with budget for an activity.

If you think you want to get involved in either group, please get in touch.

As you'll have seen we have confirmed the date and location for the Cultural Compact Conference (28th March, 10am – 4pm at Avoncroft Museum) which we will be frequently reminding you of in the coming weeks. On this day we'll review progress and activity so far, but the main focus will be on future planning. So – please put the date in your diaries.

Finally, this e-zine is for you! So please let us know of anything you might like to contribute – it's a great place to share news, opportunities, jobs and success stories with the compact members, reaching right across the Bromsgrove and Redditch areas and further afield too.

Best wishes
